Sen. Kyrsten Sinema (D-AZ)

Background

Sinema has represented Arizona’s 9th congressional district since 2012. Prior to her public-service career, she worked as a social worker, attorney, professor, and instructor at the Center for Progressive Leadership, a Washington-based institute that trains activists in progressive policies. In 2010, she was elected to the Arizona State Senate, where she sponsored several bills aimed at curbing Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio’s immigration policies, including targeted documentation checks. In Congress, Sinema was a member of the Blue Dog Coalition (comprised of conservative Democrats) as well as the bipartisan Problem Solvers Caucus. She has a center-left voting record. In 2015 and 2016, she did not vote for Nancy Pelosi for majority leader. In 2017, she voted with President Trump’s position roughly half of the time. She is the first openly bisexual Congress member.

Sen. Kevin Cramer (R-ND)

Background

Cramer, a native of Kindred, North Dakota, was elected chairman of the North Dakota Republican Party in 1991, making him the youngest member of the Republican National Committee. During the 1990s, he worked for Gov. Ed Schafer as state tourism director and then state economic development and finance director. In 2003, Gov. John Hoeven appointed Cramer to the Public Service Commission, and he was elected to the position in 2004. In 2012, he was elected to the House, where he has served on the Energy and Commerce Committee and various subcommittees. He has expressed skepticism of climate change and thinks the Environmental Protection Agency often overreaches its authority. Cramer has voted against his party only 2.9 percent of the time, less often than House Republicans’ average of 6.5 percent.

Sen. Mitt Romney (R-UT)

Background

Romney was born and raised in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. After graduating from a joint JD-MBA program at Harvard, Romney worked as a consultant at Bain & Company; he eventually served as CEO. In 1994, Romney ran for US Senate in Massachusetts. After losing to Ted Kennedy, he resumed work at Bain and became CEO of the Salt Lake Organizing Committee for the 2002 Winter Olympics. After successfully helping organize the Winter Olympics, he again ran for office, this time running successfully for governor. As governor, Romney helped develop and sign into law Massachusetts health care reform legislation that established near-universal health care access by providing subsidies and enforcing individual mandates. In 2006, he campaigned for the Republican nomination in the 2008 US presidential election but lost to John McCain. In 2012, he was successfully nominated to be the Republican Party's presidential candidate, but lost to Barack Obama in the general election.

Rep. Ann Kirkpatrick (D-AZ-2)

Background

Kirkpatrick majored in Asian studies at the University of Arizona, where she also received her law degree. In 1980, Coconino County elected Kirkpatrick as its first woman deputy county attorney, and she later served as city attorney for Sedona, Arizona. Kirkpatrick is a former representative from Arizona's first congressional district. She lost her first reelection campaign in the 2010 midterms, but regained her seat in a close 2012 race. In 2016 she unsuccessfully challenged Republican Sen. John McCain for his U.S. Senate seat. After Republican Rep. Martha McSally announced she would run for Sen. Jeff Flake's open seat, Kirkpatrick announced she would run to fill the open second district seat, which encompasses most of Tucson.

Crow is veteran Army officer who was a member of the 82nd Airborne Division in Iraq and holds a Bronze star for his service. After returning from Iraq, he joined the Army's 75th Ranger Regiment and completed two tours in Afghanistan and Pakistan. Crow left the Army in 2006 and returned to Colorado where he became an advocate for the state's veterans. In 2012, Crow advised President Obama's reelection campaign on military issues and spoke at the Democratic National Convention in favor of the repeal of the “Don’t Ask Don’t Tell” policy. Crow served five years on the Colorado Board of Veterans Affairs and acted as co-chair for Colorado Governor John Hickenlooper's Veterans Affairs Transition Committee and Veterans for Mark Udall. He most recently practiced law as a partner at the firm Holland and Hart. He lives in Denver with his wife and two children.
Rep. Jahana Hayes (D-CT-5)

Background
Hayes entered electoral politics when Rep. Elizabeth Etsy announced her retirement. Hayes entered a competitive Democratic primary against Mary Glassman, a veteran of local Connecticut politics. Hayes won the primary with a commanding lead, having run a progressive campaign that emphasized her underdog story—she grew up homeless, was pregnant as a teenager and lived through economic hardship. Before entering politics, Hayes taught social studies in high school and was a National Teacher of the Year in 2016. Hayes is the first African-American Congress member from Connecticut and the first African-American woman to represent a New England state.

Rep. Russ Fulcher (R-ID-1)

Background
Russ Fulcher is a fourth generation Idahoan who grew up on a dairy farm in Meridian and has served for 10 years in the Idaho Senate. While employed at Micron Technology, Fulcher worked his way up from a production-line worker to director of sales and marketing for the manufacturing division. He conducted business in all 50 states and worked on-site in 36 countries. He served on the Idaho Senate State Affairs and Education Committees and was elected by his colleagues to be the Senate Republican Caucus Leader for six of the 10 years he served. Fulcher worked to pass the grocery-tax credit that offsets the sales tax Idahoans pay on groceries throughout the year.

Rep. Lauren Underwood (D-IL-14)

Background
Underwood was born and raised in Naperville. She held a series of health care positions at the American Association of Colleges of Nursing, the NIH, and the Advisory Board Company from 2009 to 2010. From there, Underwood served in President Obama’s administration in the Health and Human Services as a policy coordinator and a senior advisor to the president. Underwood ran with three issue priorities: health care, jobs, and education. She ran on the platform of expanding Affordable Care Act protections, investing in small businesses to create more local jobs, and increasing affordable education, paid family leave, and equal pay. When asked about President Trump and the Mueller investigation, Underwood maintained that she would support legislation to protect the special counsel from political interference.

Background

Born in Durango, Mexico, Garcia and his family moved to Chicago when he was 10. Garcia has been involved in public service since 1984, taking on roles as a committeeman for the 22nd Ward, an Illinois Senator for the 1st District, and most recently as the Cook County commissioner. His 2018 platform promoted investment in regional transportation, restructuring Immigration and Customs Enforcement to a strictly defined role that prioritizes enforcement against violence, and instituting a universal health care under a single-payer system. Garcia ran for the 2015 mayoral election in Chicago but lost to Rahm Emanuel.

Rep. Sean Casten (D-IL-6)

Background

Casten was born in Dublin, Ireland. Prior to entering politics, Casten joined Arthur D. Little in 1997 as a consultant in its energy practice. In 2000, he became the CEO and president of Turbosteam Corporation until 2007, when Casten founded Recycled Energy Development, an energy company with a focus on reducing greenhouse-gas emissions. He has served as its CEO and president until he announced his congressional campaign in 2017. Casten has spent considerable time during the campaign talking about climate change and initiating a shift towards clean energy. He has also claimed that his priorities would be defending the Affordable Care Act, expanding health-care coverage, and working to repeal the tax reform that passed in December 2017.

Background

Born and raised in Chicago, Pressley attended Boston University from 1992 to 1994, but left school before graduating to support her mother, who had lost her job. After leaving college, she worked as a district representative for US Rep. Joseph Kennedy II, where she worked with senior citizens, veterans and people with disabilities in the district. In 2009, she served as US Sen. John Kerry’s political director. Pressley was elected to the Boston City Council in 2009 and served until 2018, when she declared her intent to challenge incumbent Democrat Rep. Michael Capuano (MA-07). She defeated Capuano in the Democratic primary and – facing no Republican challenger in the general election – became the first African-American woman to represent Massachusetts. Pressley has championed universal health care and called for the defunding of US Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), and she stated on the campaign trail that ending sexual violence would be a priority during her tenure.

Background

Sherrill graduated from flight school as part of the first class of women eligible for combat, and went on to serve as a helicopter pilot for the Navy. Before entering government, Sherrill worked in the litigation department of Kirkland & Ellis. Sherrill left that firm in 2012 to join the US Attorney’s Office for the District of New Jersey, where she rose to become a federal prosecutor as an assistant US attorney for the District of New Jersey. She launched her political campaign to replace 12-incumbent GOP Rep. Rodney Frelinghuysen, who announced his retirement in January. Sherrill ran on a platform of protecting the Affordable Care Act, and she refused corporate donations to her campaign.

Rep. Steven Horsford (D-NV-4)

Background

Horsford is serving his second, non-consecutive term as Nevada’s 4th district representative. He was first elected in 2012, after Nevada added another district following the 2010 census, then lost re-election in 2014. Horsford supports responsible gun control after losing his father to gun violence when he was 19 years old. Prior to his most recent election, he was CEO of the Culinary Academy and led Nevada Partners, the largest job training program in Nevada. Horsford served as Nevada’s first African American state Senate Majority Leader. While in the state legislature, Horsford authored and passed the Nevada Lands Bill to create jobs across the state. He also worked to pass the Clean energy Jobs Initiative to progress Nevada’s role in renewable energy. Horsford beat Cresent Hardy in the November 6 general election. Between terms, he ran his own small business.
